lief corps. MUCH INSANITY THREATENED. comprehended can scarcely fail to produce many cases of permanent or temporary insanity. Most of the faces that one meets, both male and female, are those of the most profound melancholia, associated with an almost absolute disregard of the future. The nervous system shows the strain it has borne by a tremulousness of the hand and of the hp, in man as well as in woman. This nervous state is fur-ther evidenced by a peculiar intonation of words, the persons speaking mechanically, while the voices of many rough-looking men are changed into such tremulous notes of so high a pitch as to make one imagine that a child, on the verge of tears, is speaking.

Crying is so rare that your correspondent saw not a tear on any face in Johnstown, but the women that are left are haggard, with pinched features and heavy, dark lines under their eyes. Indeed, the evidence of systemic disturbance is so marked in almost every individual who was present at the time of the catastrophe that it is possible with the eye alone to separate the residents from those outside. The Englishman was Silenced.

From the Boston Courier. An Englishman was being entertained in a Beacon-street parlor one evening, when the tibuled limited express leaving Washington via Beacon-street parlor one evening, when the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at 3 p. m. daily conversation turned upon the difference between English and American cities.

"One thing is very shocking to us," the Englishman observed, "and that is the many cases of violence in the streets here. That, you know, is so different in the English city."

"Different!" exclaimed one of the young ladies who were entertaining the guest; "I never saw half the violence in the streets here that I have in England. Why, when we were in Liverpool last summer we started out one day to take a walk, and we had only got across the street from the hotel when a horrible great drunken fishwife came up to me without any provocation and offered to fight me for sixpence. I never was so frightened in all my life."

"What did you do? Call the police?" she was asked. "Call the police?" she echoed. "There were no police in sight to call. I don't know what I should have done if a coal-heaver hadn't come along and volunteered to take the quarrel off my hands by fighting the horrible creature for nothing. "And you got away without harm?"

"Yes; but I never had anything like that happen to me on the streets of an American city."

"No," the visitor responded dryly, "it couldn't, you know. An American coal heaver would have charged you at least double for taking the affair off your hands."

"Very likely," coolly put in a young lady who had not yet spoken, "for the truth is that only in England are even coal-heavers fond of fighting with women."
The conversation was found to be taking a turn that would not on the whole prove coa-ducive to social harmony, and the subject was She Could Smell It. From the Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph

"Yes, I know why," she replied.

"Ah, how do you know?"

"Why, you're drinking again, and intend to make a night of it."

"Indeed I am not," protested McSwilligen.

"I have not touched a drop for a year."

"O, you can't impose on me that way," insisted his wife. "I can smell your breath."

And she hung up the receiver with a rattle that almost dislocated the instrument.

During the discussion of the budget M. Dreyfus moved that the sum of 3,000,000 francs be added to the estimates for the secret service. He said that the recent revelations, showing ing to many of these accounts there was how ready the German government was to expend money in buying an English journal, clearly demonstrated that Germany's idea of warfare was not merely a question of cannon balls. M. Spuller, minister of foreign affairs, said he would not refuse increased means to assist the diplomacy of France. The motion was referred to a committee. Two hundred and fifty members of the chamber of deputies have signed a response to the memorial sent by two hundred and sixty-three members of the British house of commons to President Carnot in relation to the absence of Lord Lytton, the British ambassador, at the opening of the Paris exposition. The response expresses gratitude for the assurance of sympathy for France which that our men had the head of battle, but the memorial contar ed, and utters the hope that those who signed it will join in an international parliamentary conference on the 29th inst., at which authorized representatives of public opinion may unite to chase away the threats darkening the political horizon.

in addition to the prelates selected by the pope, the French government insisted on the eievation of Mgr. Foulon, archoishop of Lyons. This gives you an idea of the importance attached to the next conclave, and a farther illustration is to be had in the official announcement that President Carnot will receive the berettes from the pope and in person present them. them to the three new French cardinals. "But what has this to do with the opposition to an Italian candidate?" was the query. The prelate smiled, evidently amused at what

Is it surprising that France fears a transfer of this to Italy, among other considerations, in return for the restoration of temporal power? France still enjoys the privileges, and this is only one instance where complications might arise." "And all this leads you to believe that the only compromise is an American cardinal-Gibbons, for instance?"

Exactly; and I predict that under his administration the Roman question would be settled. The European governments are considerably perturbed over the possibilities of the conclave, and would certainly unite in offering inducements to Italy to grant a certain territory to the pope, in which he would be a sovereign, perfectly free and independent, untransmeled by allegiance to any one government. There is none with whom negotiations could be carried on better than a citizen of the great republic of the west. I would like to see him pope myself, wouldn't you?"

"Certainly," was the newspaper man's reply
as he added that he always was anxious to see the United States come out ahead, no matter in what contest ran the candidate who wore the American colors—red, white, and blue.
